Ways to support your son at home:

Read daily and record your comments in the reading record.
Play number games to develop your son's use and understanding of number in real life.
Encourage your son to look at clocks and begin to show an awareness of time.
Play board games to encourage turn taking and sharing – and to help them learn that they cannot always win!
Encourage their interest in our topics in school – visit the library, use the internet together, spot things when you are out walking that develop their knowledge and enthusiasm.
Make sure your son completes his homework and always tries his best!
Encourage your son to be more independent at home – make sure he dresses himself, puts on his shoes, packs his own bag. It might take some time to start with, but it will be of huge benefit to him (and you!) in the end.
